OUR STORY

A ring of Windsor toughs and local associates in the early 1930s, the Rebel Blues were a notorious but motley clan. When they weren't racketeering or organising a shakedown, you'd find them hoovering a plate of Moo-saa-ka in their underground ouzo distillery and dive bar. Word has it that to prove their worth, prospective members were required to cook the Boss' saganaki per his secret recipe. Only three members were made, and the rest? Forever sworn to the code of silence.
